The word "charm" is just a generic term for a talisman or amulet that holds a magical or spiritual purpose. For interest sake, a talisman is a object that draws and concentrates energy to it such as good fortune, confidence, or strength from a belief, while an amulet is an object that wards off energy, usually of the harmful variety. I only explain this because in it's essence, a charm symbolizes something of meaning to the person who holds it and it is in the power of that belief that ...
